Making Healthcare Affordable Through 'Jan Aushadhi'

Ritesh Kumar

he delivery of healthcare has historically been premised on the notion that when treatment of patients is concerned, price should not be a hindrance. However, access to life-saving medication remains inadequate in reality. According to the World Health Organisation, over a third of the global populace lacks access to essential medications, and more than half of this group resides in impoverished regions of the developing world, such as Africa and Numerous factors determine the accessibility of drugs in developing nations, with cost being a critical one. One approach to mitigate the rising cost of healthcare is to employ generic drugs. Generic medications present a significant opportunity to lower healthcare expenditures since they can substantially less costly than branded pharmaceuticals.

The primary objective of every Government's health agenda should be to provide timely access to affordable, safe, and effective products. Despite the fact that most developing nations mandate the use of generic medications in their national health policy statements, majority of healthcare practitioners and consumers further compounded by the absence of remain dubious about their effectiveness, initiatives by government and nonquality, and safety. This skepticism is government organisations in developing countries to promote the benefits of generic drugs to consumers.

What are Generic Medicines?

Developing new medicines is a time taking and costly process. Prior to marketing receiving authorisation, pharmaceutical companies must subject developed molecules, or medicines, to animal and human testing to ascertain their safety and efficacy in treating the targeted condition. Moreover, the development process is fraught with risk, as medicines may fail to pass requisite tests, leading to substantial financial losses for the company. Consequently, those medicines that qualify the tests and make it to the market must recoup the costs of those that did not, leading to a high price point.

In light of the high costs associated with drug development, the profit-driven nature of pharmaceutical companies, and the need to incentivize further research and development, a company that develops a new medicine is granted a period of exclusivity during which only it may produce and market the medicine. This period of exclusivity, commonly known as patent period, may be monetised by n modern times, technology is the primary driver of functionality in human society. The development and progression of cuttingedge technology, such as quantum computing and artificial intelligence, have fundamentally altered the way we perform tasks. In addition to the humanmachine interface, which connects people and machines, there has been an increase in the innovation of virtual and realworld integration through Virtual Reality (VR), Augmented Reality (AR), and Mixed Reality (MR) technologies.

VR and AR can be viewed as two complementary approaches to presenting reality through technology. Both seek to enhance a person's sensory experience by immersing them in a virtual environment. VR is associated with home computers and online simulations that offer a parallel realm of existence. AR, on the other hand, blends real and virtual objects and is interactive in three dimensions.

Augmented Reality (AR) has been used in a variety of areas, including gaming, entertainment, education, and advertising. However, in recent years, AR has made significant inroads into the healthcare industry, particularly in medical training, patient care, and surgical procedures.

The healthcare sector is one of the most vital industries globally, serving millions of people every day. However, it faces significant challenges, including the rising costs of services and shortage of healthcare workers. Innovative technological solutions have become increasingly necessary to help overcome these challenges and provide better patient care. This article explores the ways in which AR is aiding the healthcare sector from patient diagnosis to treatment and even post-treatment follow-up.

selling the molecule to other companies for a royalty fee. In this period of market exclusivity. companies typically sell the medicine at a premium. After the patent period expires, other companies may manufacture and sell these medicines, often at lower prices, thus becoming known as "generic medicines" or "generics." Hence, generic medicines have the same standards for purity, potency, and quality as their branded counterparts.

Use of Generic Medicines in India

Pradhan Mantri Bharatiya Jan Aushadhi Pariyojana: In 2008, the Indian Government launched a nationwide scheme to promote the use of generic medicines. The scheme, now known as the Pradhan Mantri Bharatiya Jan Aushadhi Pariyojana (PMBJP), is a flagship scheme that aims to scheme.

- To create self-employment opportunities for people through the setting up of Jan Aushadhi Kendras.
- Reduce government's budgetary support for medicines having such degree and produce proof thereof at the time of final approval.

 For setting up Jan Aushadhi Kendras inside the premises of hospitals and medical colleges, the management of the establishment can recommend suitable organisations, charitable trusts or even individuals.

Jan Aushadhi Kendras: Excellent Opportunity for Entrepreneurial and Career Growth

The PMBJP is implemented through the setting up of Jan Aushadhi Kendras across the country. These Kendras are owned and operated by Applications can be submitted through both online and offline modes.

Infrastructure and logistics requirements:

- Built-up area of at least 120 square feet.
- Pharmacist Licence
- Non-refundable application fees of Rs. 5,000/- is to be deposited along with application form.
- If the applicant belongs to the category of Women Entrepreneurs, Divyang, SC, ST & any entrepreneurs of aspirational districts (backward district) as notified by the NITI Aayog, in Himalayan, Island territories and North- Eastern states then there is no need to pay any application fee.

Eligibility for vendors and suppliers:

PMBJP also offers excellent opportunities for manufacturers and distributors to scale up their business by supplying generic medicines, surgical devices and consumables to Jan Aushadhi Kendras. Such Kendras procure medicines and devices covering all major therapeutic groups. They also procure nutraceutical products like chyawanprash, protein powder, malt-based food supplements and Ayush products like immunity boosters for adults and children. The kendras are also mandated to sell affordable sanitary pads for women's health and hygiene.

(More details about applications for opening Jan Aushadhi Kendras are provided in the official website of PMBJP - http://janaushadhi.gov.in).

Procurement of Jan Aushadhi Products

Procurement of products is done from vendors/ suppliers/ manufacturers having WHO-GMP certified facilities through e-tender portal (CPPP) of the Government of India. The product basket has been increased to 1759 Medicines and 280 surgical equipment and consumables from 600 medicines and 150 surgical items in 2017-18. The Kendras are provided with SAP (Systems Applications and Products) based inventory management and forecasting system. The portal also has a system of blacklisting/debarring vendors/ suppliers/ manufacturers for failure in supply, also penalty is imposed for late delivery.

Margins and Incentives

Department of Pharmaceuticals, Ministry of Chemicals & Fertilizers, Government of India has an incentive scheme for the promotion of Jan Aushadhi Kendra under which an incentive of Rs. 5.00 Lakh is given:

- i. The incentive of Rs. 5.00 lakh is given @ 15% of monthly purchases made, subject to a ceiling of Rs. 15,000/- per month. The incentives are being provided to all entrepreneurs of any class that are linked with PMBI through a software (POS).
- ii. One-time additional incentive of Rs. 2.00 lakh (as reimbursement for IT & infra expenditure) is provided to the PMBJP Kendras opened in North-Eastern States, Himalayan areas, Island territories and backward areas mentioned as Aspirational District by NITI Aayog or if opened by women entrepreneur, Divyang and SC & ST, Ex-Serviceman.

individuals, self-help groups, and organisations. The one-time financial assistance provided to the Jan Aushadi Kendra owners has been enhanced from

Under the PMBJP, PMBI procures generic medicines directly from manufacturers and supplies them to Jan Aushadhi Kendras. The scheme also involves the branding and marketing of generic medicines under the name of 'Jan Aushadhi.' The generic medicines sold under the PMBJP are required to meet the quality standards set by the Central Drugs Standard Control Organisation (CDSCO).

The PMBJP has the following objectives:

- To make quality generic medicines available at affordable prices to the masses.
- To reduce the out-of-pocket expenditure on healthcare.
- To promote the use of generic medicines.

The Kendras are required to sell generic medicines under the Jan Aushadhi brand at a discount of up to 90% compared to the market price of branded medicines. The Kendras are also required to maintain a stock of at least 500 medicines covering all therapeutic categories.

Eligibility criteria to open PMBJP Kendra:

- Any Indian national including male, female and persons with disabilities of age 21 years and above.
- Applicants must themselves possess D. Pharma/ B. Pharma or any pharma degree or should employ persons

eof at the Quality Assurance of Products

 Medicines are procured only from World Health Organization-Good Manufacturing Practices (WHO-GMP), Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI) and CE Certified suppliers.

- Two-tier quality assurance by testing at 13 NABL accredited laboratories (National Accreditation Board for Testing and Calibration Laboratories).
- 99%+ batches met quality parameters.
- \bullet Regular comparison with popular branded medicines in terms of assay & solubility etc.

Storage and Logistics

The Jan Aushadhi medicines are delivered to the kendras through IT-enabled end-to-end supply chain system. There is a central warehouse at Gurugram and three regional warehouses at Chennai, Guwahati and Surat. These warehouses cover all kendras existing in different parts of the country. So far, 36 distributors have also been appointed across States/UTs to strengthen the supply chain system. It has been targeted to establish 6 warehouses by 2025.

Impact of PMBJP

The PMBJP has had a significant impact on the Indian healthcare system since its launch. As of March 2023, there are over 9,000 Jan Aushadhi Kendras across the country, 1759 generic medicines, and 280 surgical equipments are being sold under the scheme. In the last eight years, there has been 100 times increase in the sale of generic drugs through the Jan Aushadhi Kendras.

According to latest Health Ministry data, on an average, 1.2 million persons visit Jan Aushadhi outlets every day. The key success factors of PMBJP include quality assurance of products, efficient logistics, incentivising the entrepreneurs, adequate product constant communication and awareness, savings to the citizens. Jan Aushadhi Kendras has resulted in huge savings in out-of-pocket expenditure of beneficiaries, amounting to approximately Rs 20,000 crore (more than USD 2 Billion) in past 8 years.

The PMBJP has also created self-employment opportunities for people. The setting up of Jan Aushadhi Kendras has provided people with a source of income and has helped to create local employment opportunities. In 2014-15, Jan Aushadhi Kendras sold generic drugs and creation of virtual 3D models of the human body. Medical students can view and manipulate these models on devices such as tablets and smart-phones, allowing them to see the intricate details of human anatomy in a more realistic way. This can help students to better understand complex concepts and processes. Medical students can use AR technology to practise surgical techniques and procedures, such as inserting catheters or performing laparoscopic surgery. This allows students to gain valuable hands-on experience in a safe and controlled environment, without the risk of harming real patients.

In addition to anatomy and surgical training, AR can also be used to teach students about the effects of medication and drugs on the human body. AR can display graphics and animations that show how specific drugs interact with the body, giving students a better understanding of the pharmacological effects of different drugs.

AR for Surgical Precision

The use of augmented reality (AR) in surgery has emerged as an innovative approach to improving healthcare outcomes. Medical surgeries are a critical aspect of healthcare, and the integration of AR technology can offer several advantages. One such benefit is the ability to provide a realistic depiction of surgical procedures during various kinds of operations. AR can serve as a practice tool for medical students, enabling them to learn medical processes without relying solely on traditional cadaver-based practice. Additionally, the use of AR can guide learners through the steps of the procedure, facilitating the learning by process providing hands-on experience.

Surgical procedures have a considerable mortality rate, and implementing AR can offer improved safety measures for patients. Surgeons can be assisted by their peers virtually, and the use of AR can provide real-time information on organ location, steps to deal with complications, vein mesh, and patient reports and conditions. This information can be displayed in front of the surgeon's eyes, allowing them to make informed decisions during surgery.

Another advantage of using AR in surgery is the ability to leverage remote expertise. In some cases, a specialist may be required to perform surgery, but they may be located miles away. By using AR-based applications and digital devices, surgeons can maintain real-time visual-based communication with remote specialists while performing surgery. Combining AR-based features with advanced analytics like artificial intelligence and the Internet of Things can offer even more significant benefits, further improving surgical outcomes.

AR for Accurate Vein Location

Accurate and efficient vein location is crucial in many medical procedures such as intravenous injections, blood sampling, and catheterisation. Traditional methods of locating veins, such as palpation and visual inspection, can be time-consuming, inaccurate, and sometimes difficult in certain cases. AR technology offers a promising solution to this problem. AR can be used to superimpose a real-time image of the patient's veins onto the skin's surface, providing medical professionals with a clear and accurate view of the veins. This is accomplished using a specialised AR device, such as a headset or a tablet, which utilises advanced computer vision algorithms and real-time image processing. By providing medical professionals with a clear and detailed view of the veins in real-time, AR technology can help to avoid the need for multiple needle insertions, reducing patient discomfort and the risk of complications. Furthermore, technology can be particularly useful in situations where traditional vein location methods are challenging, such as with patients with dark skin or with small or difficult-to-locate veins.

AR in Medical Imaging

Medical imaging refers to the use of technology to produce visual representations of the interior of the body, which are then used by medical professionals to diagnose and treat various conditions. Augmented reality (AR) technology has the potential to enhance medical imaging by providing real-time, interactive visual feedback to medical professionals.

AR technology can be used to create specialised devices that combine with sensors and software to capture various readings and images of the internal organs. This information can then be displayed in real-time, using graphics and other visual aids to provide a comprehensive and detailed view of the patient's condition. This can help medical professionals to identify potential problems more quickly and accurately, and to tailor treatment plans accordingly.

One of the major advantages of AR in medical imaging is that it can help to educate patients about their condition and treatment options. By displaying visual representations of the patient's internal organs and showing how various treatments will affect them, medical professionals can help patients to better understand their condition and make informed decisions about their treatment.

Furthermore, AR technology can be used to create virtual simulations of medical procedures, allowing medical professionals to practise and refine their techniques before performing them on patients. This can help to reduce the risk of errors and complications during procedures, leading to better outcomes for patients.

AR for Improved Symptoms Description

Frequently, patients struggle to convey the precise nature of their current health conditions to medical professionals, often either embellishing or downplaying the symptoms they experience. predicament can result in misdiagnosis and suboptimal treatment outcomes. However, the implementation of augmented reality technology can provide doctors with an unfiltered and comprehensive perspective of a patient's condition, independent of subjective patient reports. This technology enables doctors to accurately assess the severity of a patient's symptoms and deliver appropriate treatment.

This innovative technology not only helps doctors to accurately diagnose and treat conditions, but it also facilitates patients' comprehension of their symptoms, thus promoting greater engagement and participation in their treatment plan.

AR for Drug Information

Innovative drug information can be imparted to patients in a more engaging and effective manner through the use of augmented reality and cutting-edge graphics. This approach allows pharmaceutical companies to establish a credible and reliable reputation in the minds of patients by providing them with a 3D visualisation of how the medication operates within their bodies to combat specific medical conditions.

Gone are the days when patients were left to decipher complicated medical language on the back of their syrup bottles to understand the drug's effectiveness. By leveraging augmented reality technology, patients can now gain a more intuitive understanding of how the drug interacts with their body. To implement this approach, pharmaceutical companies can create a detailed video graphic on their website, which patients can access by scanning the barcode on the medication bottle. This allows patients to see for themselves how the medication works, and they can do so from the comfort of their own homes.

Moreover, the use of augmented reality technology is not limited to patient education. Pharmaceutical companies can also use it to guide workers throughout the manufacturing process by providing detailed instructions and images through their smart phones or screens installed on the factory floor. This ensures that the manufacturing process is executed with the utmost precision and consistency, resulting in high-quality medications that are safe and effective.

AR Related Healthcare Sector Jobs

There are several different types of professionals or job roles involved in aiding the healthcare sector with augmented reality (AR). Here are a few examples:

Design Architect: The professionals working for this job profile focus on designing the interior and exterior of the AR devices used for medical purposes.

Software Developers and Trainers:
There is substantial demand for professionals who design and develop AR applications and software solutions for the healthcare sector. Not only this, the service providers also deploy such profesionals as trainers and assistants to guide healthcare workers including doctors and nurses in using AR tools and software.

Medical Imaging Specialists: These professionals specialise in interpreting medical images, such as X-rays, MRI scans, and CT scans, and can use AR to visualise medical images in 3D and improve the accuracy of diagnoses.

Medical Educators: Medical educators can use AR technology to create interactive medical training simulations for medical students and healthcare professionals, teaching anatomy, surgical procedures, and more.

Medical Device Manufacturers: It is become imperative for medical device manufacturers to understand AR technology for designing and developing new medical devices and visualising how the device will interact with the patient's body.

UX Designers: User experience (UX) designers specialise in designing interfaces that are easy to use, visually appealing, and intuitive. In healthcare, UX designers use AR to create interfaces that allow healthcare professionals to easily access and visualise medical data.

Data Analysts: These professionals are responsible for collecting and analysing healthcare data to identify trends and insights that can improve patient outcomes. AR can be used to visualise and interact with this data in new ways, making it easier to understand and act upon.

Project Managers: Project managers oversee the development and implementation of AR solutions in healthcare, ensuring that projects are completed on time, within budget, and to the satisfaction of stakeholders.

As AR technology continues to evolve, we can expect to see even more roles emerge in this field.

Where and How to Study AR?

The National Education Policy (NEP) 2020 highlights the importance of focusing on student learning outcomes and making quality education accessible, affordable, equitable and inclusive. On these lines, the All India Council for Technical Education (AICTE) has prepared model curriculum for courses in emerging areas like (i) Artificial Intelligence (AI), (ii) Internet of Things (IoT), (iii) Block Chain, (iv) Robotics, (v) Quantum Computing (vi) Data Science (vii) Cyber Security (viii) 3D Printing and Design and (ix) Augmented Reality (AR)/Virtual Reality (VR) etc., and permitted in engineering institutes from academic year 2020-21.

Many engineering colleges have started offering courses on AR and VR in various modes and at various levels. Besides, one can also pursue AR/VR through different MOOC (Massive Online Open Courses) platforms like Coursera, Udemy, Lynda, Youtube, edEX, Circuit Stream, etc.

Eligibility: Although the eligibility for each course changes according to the

BEST ENTRY FOR

ISSUE DATED 11 - 17 March 2023

Question: On 16th March every year, National Vaccination Day is observed in India to acknowledge and appreciate the hard work of frontline healthcare workers to ensure the vaccination of every child. India's vaccination drive against COVID was widely applauded. What, in your opinion, were the pros of the COVID vaccination drive and how India's digital infrastructure supported it?

Sunil K Jha

The COVID vaccination drive has brought several benefits in the fight against the pandemic, such as:

- Protection against severe illness: Vaccines reduce the risk of severe illness, hospitalisation, and death from COVID-19.
- Herd immunity: Vaccines helped create herd immunity, which means that a large portion of the population becomes immune to the virus, making it difficult for the virus to spread.
- Resuming normal activities: Vaccination helped individuals safely resume normal activities, such as attending events, travelling, and going to work or school.

India's digital infrastructure played a crucial role in supporting the COVID vaccination drive in several ways:

• Co-WIN platform: The Government of India launched the Co-WIN platform, which enabled people to register and book appointments for vaccination online, reducing the need for physical contact and queuing.

- Real-time monitoring: The digital infrastructure enabled real-time monitoring of the vaccination drive, including the number of people vaccinated, the availability of vaccines, and the distribution of vaccines across the country.
- Information dissemination: Digital platforms were used to disseminate information about the vaccine, its safety, and efficacy, as well as to dispel myths and misinformation about vaccination.
- Adverse effect monitoring: Digital systems were used to monitor adverse effect following vaccination, ensuring that any potential side effects were identified and addressed promptly.

In summary, India's digital infrastructure played a crucial role in facilitating the COVID vaccination drive, from registration and scheduling to real-time monitoring and information dissemination. The digital infrastructure helped to make the vaccination drive more efficient, effective, and accessible to the general public.

Conclusion

The healthcare industry has been exhibiting a dynamic and technologically advanced approach by leveraging the potential of augmented reality. This innovation has facilitated a seamless and user-friendly experience for both healthcare practitioners and patients alike. The employment of this technology has facilitated an interactive and informative experience, enabling patients to remain cognizant of the medications, their health status, and progress details. Furthermore, the implementation of augmented reality has endowed the healthcare system with transparency, education, and adaptability. This technology has opened diverse avenues for its application, ranging from the comprehensive training of aspiring medical professionals to the execution of intricate medical procedures with minimal scope for errors.

In addition to its multifarious utilities, augmented reality has demonstrated remarkable cost-effectiveness, particularly when contrasted with traditional medical learning tools that are prohibitively expensive and necessitate extensive medical exposure for optimal comprehension. Thus, augmented reality has emerged as an economical, descriptive, and promising solution for the healthcare industry.

equipments worth Rs 7.29 crore which has increased to Rs 1094.84 crore as on 28th February 2023.

Legal Framework and Regulations for Generic Drugs Use

The Indian Medical Council (Professional Conduct, Etiquette and Ethics) Regulations 2002, mandates physicians to prescribe drugs using their generic names, in a clear and eadable manner, preferably in capital letters. Additionally, the National Medical Commission (formerly known as Medical Council of India), had issued directives requiring all registered medical practitioners to adhere to these provisions. Further, the National Medical Commission Act of 2019, the State Medical Councils/Ethics and Medical Registration Board (EMRB) of the Commission are empowered to take disciplinary action against physicians who violate the aforementioned regulations. When complaints regarding the breach of the code of ethics for doctors are lodged, the EMRB forwards these complaints to the relevant State Medical Councils where the doctors or medical practitioners are registered. The states are also advised to ensure the prescription of generic drugs in public health facilities.

Spreading Awareness

Jan Aushadhi Diwas is celebrated every year on 7th March for dissemination of information and spreading awareness about the scheme.

The Department of Pharmaceuticals/Pharmaceuticals & Medical Devices Bureau of India (PMBI) spreads awareness about the scheme through advertisements by Electronic Media, Print Media as well as through Outdoor publicity. In addition, information disseminated about the benefits of Jan Aushadhi generic medicines and the scheme through social media platforms. PMBI also maintains a mobile application namely Jan Aushadhi Sugam, a single window platform to assist users in many ways like locating nearby PMBJK, searching Jan Aushadhi medicines, telephone numbers, etc. Further, besides focusing on consumers, efforts are also made in addressing specific issues related to generics to the healthcare professionals.

This year, on the occasion of Jan Aushadhi Diwas, a 7-day nationwide drive was implemented. Seminars for health care professionals like doctors, nurses, pharmacists were carried out across the country in collaborations with educational institutes. It is important to educate this group of people, especially on general concepts of bioequivalence, as this topic is not well understood by many practicing healthcare professionals. To overcome this problem, educational seminars were held across the country at Pharma Colleges and Universities where thousands of students/medical students/ paramedical students were imparted valuable information about generic medicines with focus on PMBJP. The students were encouraged to take up entrepreneurial endeavours by actively participating in opening Aushadhi Kendras. Additionally, the programmes also saw discussions among stakeholders on the prospects of promoting such educational seminars on generic medicines to be made part of compulsory professional continuous development programs by respective professional bodies. Similarly, educational institutes delivering courses on medicines have been encouraged to incorporate topics on rational prescribing in their standard therapeutics course so that future health care professional who will be directly involved in patient care such as doctors, nurses, and pharmacists are well informed on every aspect of rational prescribing since their junior years.

The World's Pharmacy: India's Generic Drug Industry

India has gained a strong foothold on the global scene with its innovatively-engineered generic drugs and active pharmaceutical ingredients (APIs). India Generic Drugs market stood at USD 24.53 billion in 2022 and is expected to grow at a steady CAGR of 6.97% during the forecast period of 2018-2028. Consistent with India's guiding principle of 'Vasudhaiva Kutumbakam', the Indian pharmaceutical industry has taken a leadership role in the global market and has worked tirelessly towards the betterment of mankind, ensuring the abundant availability of highquality pharmaceuticals for mass consumption at reasonable prices. India's unwavering commitment to collaborating with partner countries demonstrates the country's dedication to creating strong relationships and further deepening such partnerships beyond mere trade, towards promoting welfare. It is fitting to describe India as the pharmacy of the world, with a 50% share of exports and the production of one out of every five generic pills globally, which has played a significant role in making medicines more affordable in numerous countries worldwide.
